Consultation Confirmation and Reflection

My meeting with Jack Henderson, URI Gaming Club president took place in the URI Memorial Union room 312A (Gaming Club Room) on Friday, January 31st at approximately 3:00 pm. We discussed the plan that I had drafted including the Waterfall SDLC approach, the logo I had created, timeline of events, site map and wireframes, as well as general plan and features for the site (all of which appear in the design document). A handful of features were discussed, including adding a photo/video album page to document the club's vast history, a way for club E-Board members to edit the content and events on the site without having to do so through the back end, including a login page for the E-Board. These changes were added to the site map and wireframes, and the design document was updated with all of these changes. We will likely go further into changing things and making decisions once I have actually progressed on the site, as Jack said he feels he will be able to better influence the direction of the site once he can see it, which makes sense to me. A feature that was brought up that may not be possible was adding the ability for site visitors to sign up for events directly through the site without having to go to the third party website, Start.gg, the platform where most of the events are run. I am keeping this on my radar and will explore the possibility of adding these features. This meeting was very productive and it seems we share a very similar vision for the site. I am really looking forward to this project and hope to do right by the club and the current E-Board's vision for its future. An email confirming this meeting and approving the decisions made during it will be included in the documentation folder.
